Diocese of Lismore launches Flood Disaster Appeal

The Bishop of Lismore, the Most Reverend Gregory Homeming has launched an appeal to help those who have suffered in the recent floods on the North Coast of NSW (including those on the Tweed, Murwillumbah, Mullumbimby and Lismore).

Bishop Homeming launched the Appeal today, saying “we are very conscious that many people have lost their homes and their livelihoods and are now in the greatest need of assistance. It is our duty to do whatever we can to help them.”

All donations are tax deductible and will be distributed directly to people in the worst affected areas. The Diocese is working with local councils and agencies to ensure that real needs are addressed and that relief efforts are not duplicated.

To donate, go to the Diocese of Lismore Flood Appeal website at www.dioceseoflismorefloodappeal.org.

“We want the communities of the NSW North Coast to know we are with them in their struggles,” said Bishop Homeming.
