Emergency appeal for earthquake victims

Aid to the Church in Need (ACN) has opened an emergency fund for people in northern Syria desperate for help following a series of devastating earthquakes earlier this week.

ACN is appealing for funds to support local Church partners helping those plunged into dire need by the natural disasters.

The charity is currently in dialogue with project partners and expects to be able to shortly confirm a fresh aid package which will focus on two key areas.

Firstly, it will support minor or major repairs in Aleppo which will allow those currently being sheltered by the Church to return soon to their homes. This includes repairs to heating and water systems as well as structural damage resulting from the quakes. Furthermore, it will providing blankets, food and other essential aid for those who have been forced out of their homes by the natural disaster in Aleppo and Lattakia, where many of the inhabitants are internally displaced people who fled their homes during the country's civil war.
