ACRATH MEDIA RELEASE 9 September 2024

ACRATH Advocates for Systemic Change

ACRATH staff and members are at Parliament House this week talking modern slavery and human trafficking with Members of Parliament. ACRATH, on its 19th annual advocacy trip to Canberra, is pressing for systemic change on several issues impacting victim/survivors of human trafficking.

This year, ACRATH has identified three issues aimed at preventing the exploitation of people in Australia while also ensuring that victim/survivors can access their fundamental human rights. ACRATH is also keen to speak to MPs and commend the government for the significant reforms recently announced.

ACRATH's agenda includes advocating for the implementation of a national compensation scheme for victim/survivors of modern slavery, and the establishment of a national labour hire licensing scheme.

Additionally, ACRATH is calling on the federal government to improve international students' experience of study and life in Australia.
